DOCTOR OF MEDICAL LEADERSHIP PROGRAM

INFORMATION FOR EMPLOYERS

CRICOS Provider Number 00025B
ABOUT THE PROGRAM
• 3 year fulltime or 4-6 years part time
• Includes a clinically-embedded scholarly research project, with concurrent leadership training.
• Designed to be completed alongside part time or full time clinical employment.

Employees will:
• develop advanced professional skills by undertaking a research project addressing a clinical problem identified and agreed with their clinical supervisor
• undertake medical leadership training and mentoring

EMPLOYER BENEFITS
UQ’s DMedLead provides an opportunity to strengthen medical leadership capacity and improve clinical outcomes for your health service. Your employee’s research will focus on a project specific to your workplace and will produce tangible outcomes for your organisation.

UQ will work with you and the candidate to develop a research project that reflects the needs and the skills development required by both you and your employee. This program supports the development and retention of highly qualified, committed future medical leaders who will contribute their growing skills and experience to your organisation throughout their studies and beyond.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION PLEASE CONTACT
Professor Elizabeth Eakin,
Associate Dean (Research),
Faculty of Medicine,
The University of Queensland
Email: med.adr@uq.edu.au

WHAT ARE THE ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS?
• A total of at least 2 years clinical/medical work experience
• Post MBBS/MD
• Employed full time or part time in a clinical setting
• Domestic status

WHEN WILL THE CANDIDATURE COMMENCE?
Employees can commence their studies in any Research Quarter of any year.

WHAT ARE THE PROGRAM FEES?
Students enrolled in the DMedLead are eligible for Commonwealth Government Research Training Program funding, which will cover the cost of the program fees. Additional research course work fees are also covered. Candidates will be responsible, however, for course fees associated with concurrent leadership training.

WHAT IS EXPECTED OF ME AS AN EMPLOYER?
The employer must demonstrate a commitment to invest in the employee, supporting them to undertake the degree while working. The candidate must be employed at least part-time while undertaking the degree, and will be required to enrol in concurrent medical leadership training, which may take them away from their work for a short period of time, depending on the training course undertaken. The candidate must have a clinical supervisor within the workplace who will work closely with the academic supervisor to oversee the candidate’s progress and ensure that their project aligns with the workplace and academic requirements.